If topography consists in shaping a place by recomposing it according to an abstract system of points and lines, in the work of Jennifer Caubet it mainly refers to the changing reality of these spaces "between" the lines.

Entitled Topographies relatives (Relative topographies), her personal exhibition at La BF15 opens this concept pivoting between representation and experiment.

In her recent productions, Jennifer Caubet explored places based on their occupation, and generation, but also as the mere mention of a possible wait. Here, her proposal introduces us to areas of spatial potentialities, from architectural fragments and transplants coming to temporarily live in the place.

The shapes and lines that the artist deploys, replays or puts in areas that she passes, inaugurate the place of work and exhibition not only as built relationships territories but as territories to build.
